

TAKING THE PIXELS

Taking the Pixels is a Video Production agency also offering, video content, photography and aerial footage. They knew Adventure Design from a previous business relationship and started working together in early 2019.

"We had no reservations at all about working with Adventure Design. We knew the owner, Charly, from a previous business relationship and she'd always made her professional approach and extensive Marketing knowledge clear to us. What was a surprise to us though was the pricing – it was no way near as expensive as we thought!"

Adventure Design were thrilled to hear from Taking the Pixels and quickly started to discuss their project requirements. As Stephen from Taking the Pixels said:

"We really needed a roller banner to advertise our services when at events, photoshoots or on location at video productions. We do have branded clothing and car advertising but didn't have anything transportable to tell our story."

"Adventure produced two concepts for us, both of which were brilliant! It was a tough choice to pick one of them, so we actually took the artwork for both! Off the back of this, they also had a brief look at a business card design to match which they nailed too – it came back to us the same day!"

At Adventure, we're always happy to take those last-minute jobs on, even if they weren't apart of the original brief. We're happy to work with whatever you can supply in order for us to meet your requirements. Stephen continued:

"Adventure are really good at what they do. We had some design ideas but wanted to get a professionals input and we're so glad we did! We gave them some of our current material i.e. branding, colours, look and feel etc. and they turned it around in less than a couple of days!"

Quality is never compromised at Adventure. We offer personal, affordable Marketing solutions to suit all budgets, and we use the right people to do the job.

"Adventure Design's pricing allowed us to simply go ahead and order the work. They have links with printers, media agents, web designers and copywriters, so can offer the full service from concept to delivery of the physical product – every time! All of this saved us time and effort, and we know we are in safe hands to get the job done."

Whether you're a small business, a large corporate or a one-man band, we've worked with them all to align branding and produce personalised Marketing solutions that suit the businesses requirements.

"Adventure Design is an amazing resource for start-up companies and I wish we knew of them when we started out, to help us with the business essentials in print and advertising to get us up and running. That said, any SME like us, or indeed companies of any size – could easily benefit from what they do. For any future conversations I have with the businesses we work with, I will always be on the look out if they need support in this area and tell them to simply get in touch with Adventure Design – they will not let you down."

ADVENTURE DESIGN.

Small business. Small prices. Big impact.